

Dito prepares IntellectSpace for Success in Google Cloud

Dito provided IntellectSpace with landing zone guidance design as well as a server and database migration from their current Azure implementation to Google Cloud. Dito also provided network configuration and security best practices.

The challenge

IntellectSpace desired to eliminate the challenge of scaling their database and applications during peak times as well as increasing overall security and infrastructure management. Reducing the overall cost of IT was also a key interest in having Dito redesign their infrastructure design as they moved towards a managed environment.

The solution

Dito interviewed the customer to understand their needs, reviewed their current system's documentation and worked to prepare a migration plan. Dito combined knowledge, experience, and Google best practices to offer a seamless process to transition the client to Google Cloud. This was made possible by leveraging Cloud Native capabilities with minimal business disruption.

The results

Dito presented a migration plan with the ability to assess, validate, and provide feedback on each step of the process. The migration was executed within communicated outage expectations and all requirements were met according to defined deliverables. System and data integrity were reviewed and measured in a like for like comparison between source and destination platforms.

Dito used Google Cloud native tools that do not require any license cost implication. Dito used Google Cloud native tools capable of achieving a very low system's downtime with an average of 10-15 minutes. Compared to other methods that would require at least an average of 24-48 hours per system, making it challenging to reproduce and account towards any downtime window available by any customer.
