

Storio group - O365 - Workspace Data Migration

Following their merger, Photobox and albelli wanted to unite in using Google Workspace. Netpremacy, using Movebot, was able migrate albelli's Office 365 data into Photobox's existing Google tenant, thus ensuring they can move forward as one.

The challenge

albelli was a Microsoft house that relied on the Office 365 suite, whereas Google was at the core of Photobox's culture. The challenge was to decide which of the two infrastructures the newly merged company would use and work out the migration process. Ultimately, it was decided that Google Workspace's flexible features and emphasis on innovation and ease of use were better suited for their needs

The solution

Having both companies on the same platform required Netpremacy to merge 959 mailboxes, 625 my drives, and 60 Sharepoints, which totalled 22.5TB of data, utilising Movebot to achieve a successful migration. Storio group's main aim was to minimise disruption to end-users; Netpremacy advised that a staggered 'go-live' would work best, ensuring support and troubleshooting were available throughout.

The result

The decision to migrate to Google Workspace was a great success. Since the migration, teams have come together, collaboration has improved dramatically, and everyone has united under the same platform to make its collaborative culture accessible for all. Storio group has also successfully built a unified Google-centric workforce, improved IT efficiency & boosted enthusiasm across the organisation “Netpremacy ensured we were kept up to date throughout the entire process, and there was never a feeling of them just sitting on their hands and hoping it would sort itself out. Communication was back and forth constantly, and it felt very reassuring to know that they were actively engaging with us to find a solution.”
